PREFACE.

The Fine Rolls take their name from the enrolment on them of fines or payments made for writs, grants, licences, pardons and exemptions of various kinds. Such fines, however, by no means exhaust the contents, which may be more particularly classified as follows :—

1. Payments for writs.

These entries are brief notes, giving no detailed information touching the purpose for which the writ was required, and often omitting to specify the nature of the writ paid for. In form they run thus :—

Suff'. Johannes de Holebrok dat dimidiam marcam pro uno brevi. [20 Edward I, m. 2.]

Berk'. Johanna Danvers dat unam marcam solutam in hanaperio pro brevi de ingressu habendo. Teste rege apud Westmonasterium xiiij. die Octobris. [30 Henry VI, m. 30.]

This class of entry, which bulks largely on the Fine Rolls of Edward I, speedily diminishes to an insignificant proportion on the rolls of subsequent reigns.

2. Grossi Fines.

In and after 28 Edward I separate lists were drawn up each year containing fines known as Grossi Fines. From 28 Edward I to 17 Edward III these lists were attached to the rolls in the form of schedules, and from 32 Edward I to 1 Edward III were numbered as ordinary membranes. Recently, for the better preservation and more convenient handling of the rolls, they have been restitched, according to their numbering, in the body of the roll where they were originally placed, and, when not numbered, transposed to the head of the roll ; after 17 Edward III the Grossi Fines were incorporated in the rolls on the final membranes.

The entries under this head consist almost wholly of fines made for licences and pardons for the alienation and acquisition of land, for commissions of oyer and terminer, and for charters and confirmations of charters. With very few exceptions they are notes of enrolments on the Patent and Charter Rolls, and from the order in which they are set out and from their position on the roll it would appear that they were drawn up for the Fine Roll after the other rolls were completed.

3. The most important and numerous class of entries consists of enrolments of documents issued under the Great Seal in the form both of Letters Patent and of Letters Close, relating to matters in which the Crown had some direct or indirect financial interest. These include writs to escheators of diem clausit extremum, and of livery of seisin, announcing respectively the death of tenants in chief and the taking of the homage or fealty of the heirs, writs ordering the livery of goods to executors for the administration of wills, writs to sheriffs and others touching lands in the king's hand by forfeiture or otherwise, writs to the treasurer and barons of the Exchequer to assign terms for the payment of debts to the Crown and to cause fines to be taken from prisoners for their release, grants of wardships and marriages, assignments of dower, licences to marry, commitments of lands of the royal demesne or in the king's hand for any cause, and finally appointments of escheators, sheriffs, castellans, customers, collectors of subsidies and others who would be liable to account at the Exchequer for the issues of their respective offices.

It will be plain from the foregoing analysis that the Fine Rolls are a compilation of three entirely different and unrelated classes of enrolments, of which many of the most important class have no obvious connexion with the title of the rolls to which they were assigned. In the case of the rolls of the thirteenth and of the greater part of the fourteenth centuries, it is difficult to discover the observance of any rigid principle in the selection of Letters Patent or Close for enrolment on the Fine Rolls. For example, before the year 1311 appointments of sheriffs appear sometimes on the Patent Roll and sometimes on the Fine Roll, and again, writs to escheators which would normally be found on the Fine Roll are often enrolled on the Close Roll. By the end of the fourteenth century, however, the character of the rolls of this series has become more distinctly defined, and while appointments and commissions of various kinds still constitute a regular feature, the rolls deal more particularly with the business of the escheatry and the disposal of wardships.

Inasmuch as so large a proportion of the entries on the Fine Rolls related directly or indirectly to the financial side of administration, most of them had to be notified to the Exchequer, and were accordingly entered again on the series of rolls known as the Originalia, which were compiled in Chancery and transmitted thence to the department of the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer.

The series of Fine Rolls extends from the reign of John to the year 1641. The abnormal state of the realm during the Great Rebellion and the commutation of feudal tenures at the Restoration brought to a natural end a series of rolls which in the course of time had become more and more strictly concerned with the business of the system thus abolished.

The Fine Rolls of the reigns of John and Henry III have been already dealt with by the Record Commissioners, who issued a complete transcript of those of the reign of John and a selection from the enrolments on those of the reign of Henry III. [Excerpta e Rotulis Finium.] The latter publication was designed to serve mainly as a supplement to the Inquisitions Post Mortem, in the interests of genealogical study.

In resuming the work after the lapse of many years, it has been decided to issue a Calendar in English, the growth of formal phraseology in official documents rendering this method more desirable. The following principles have been observed. The entries recording payments for writs, described above in class 1, have been entirely omitted; of the Grossi Fines, described above in class 2, only such entries have been calendared as do not appear on the Patent Rolls and Charter Rolls; while the enrolments comprising class 3 have been set out without exception.

It only remains to add that the treatment of names of persons and places in this Calendar is the same as that pursued in the Calendars of the Patent, Close and Charter Rolls, and fully described in the prefaces to the volumes dealing with the Patent Rolls of the first four years of Edward III and with the Close Rolls of the first six years of Edward II.

The present volume covers the whole of the reign of Edward I. There is one Fine Roll proper to each regnal year, and in 5 Edward I a supplementary roll recording the fines made in 5, 6 and 7 Edward I for services due for the army of Wales. The text has been prepared, under my immediate supervision, by Mr. A. E. Bland, B.A., of this Office, with some assistance from Mr. A. E. Stamp, M.A., also of this Office. Mr. Bland has also compiled the Index.

Form ordained for alien religious:—

It is ordained by the king and council that foreign religious of the power of the king of France and of his allies or who are of their affinity or held to them by obedience or otherwise, dwelling thirteen miles

(liwes) or less from the sea or by waters bearing ships to the sea, be removed and put in their houses or manors, if they be found, distant twenty miles at least from the sea or such waters, or in other houses of the same order and language distant so far from the sea or such waters, and that in each house where such monks dwell the chief guardian assigned in the county put a parson, vicar or other sufficient clerk to the ward of each house and of the monks dwelling there, and that this guardian take his reasonable expenses of the chief guardian from the issues of the houses in his ward, and that each guardian keep ward in the form following, to wit, that they put Englishmen only to serve the monks, clerks or laymen, in church or without, and such for whom the guardians will answer, those who serve to be maintained from the commons which the monks provide.

And that the guardians be charged with their ward under the peril incumbent.

And that they dwell in such houses without clerk, groom and horse except in the manner above stated.

And that no stranger or private secular have access to speak to them save in the presence of the guardian.

And that they send no letters or message nor receive any save in the presence of their guardians who shall know what is contained therein.

And that they have sustenance from the goods of their houses, to wit, each of them 18*d.* a week by the hands of the chief guardians, living according to the rule of the order.

And that they go not out of the close of the houses where they dwell.

And that they have from their houses vesture and shoes according to their requirements, to wit, each of them 10*s.* a year by the hands of the chief guardians.

And that as soon as the number of the monks to be removed be known, they be sent at the costs of their houses with their beds and books for their service to the places ordained, and that a day be appointed for them to go to the places ordained for them according to the distance of the places, and that any found going about the country on any other day be arrested in the habit in which he is found, until the king express his will.

In each county according to the houses of such monks therein one or more guardians shall be appointed by the treasurer, according to the size of the ward, and they shall come to the Exchequer to take oath and receive their commissions.

And the chief guardian shall make an inventory indented, whereof one part shall remain with the treasurer and the other with him, of all goods found in his bailiwick.

And enquiry shall be made of gold and silver and vessels and of other movable goods into whosesoever hands they have come since the day of this ordinance.

Also if it be found that the monks dwelling in the places have alienated, taken away or concealed gold or silver or other treasure since Easter last year, or if debts be now due, enquiry shall be made and they shall be taken into the king's hand until further order.

And the guardian shall certify the treasurer of that which has been withdrawn and cannot be found and shall answer fully at the Exchequer for all issues of all lands, rents, churches, pensions and other profits whereof the said monks are now seised.

And for the better knowing the value of such lands, rents, churches and all other issues the treasurer shall assign lawful persons and certain others than the guardians to extend and tax them; and at the account of the said guardians at the Exchequer the costs of the monks shall be allowed them.

Also the liveries wont to be rendered from such houses by writings shall be lawfully rendered, so that he who has taken the livery of a monk shall take it as a monk by the week.

Also the pensions and robes due by writings shall be rendered according to the purport of the writings to those seised thereof.

Also where such alien religious have a common chapter seal or other seal of authority, the seal shall be put in the ward of the monks in the places where they shall be dwelling, together with the charters, fines and muniments of their houses under the seal of the chief guardian of their houses with the seals of two good and lawful men of the same vicinage.

The relics, library, vestments and other ornaments found in such houses shall remain in safe keeping by the assent of the monks thereof and in the said houses by witness and view of two good men of the same vicinage by chirograph indented between the guardians and the monks, saving the vestments, books and ornaments of the churches necessary for the service thereof; and in a religious house where there is a conventual or parish church served by a monk, the service shall be maintained by an honest and sufficient English priest where there is no English monk.

And if there be English monks, they shall dwell in peace and do service and take each for his sustenance as much as one of the aliens removed as aforesaid; and where more secular priests are wont to be of necessity, as by alms established, the alms shall be sustained as anciently established and used hitherto.

Alms also anciently ordained and established and used hitherto as in food or clothing of the poor in the same places, according as they can be reasonably, lawfully and certainly ascertained, shall be sustained to the honour of God.

Also it is ordained touching secular parsons of churches of the power of the king of France or of his allies, resident in England, if they be within thirteen miles of the sea etc. as aforesaid, that the bishops of those places cause them to be removed and put in places more remote where they can dwell without suspicion, and that such parsons have the ward and issues of their benefices by the hands of their proctors, who shall be English and assigned by them thereto.

And if such parsons be not dwelling in England, their bishops shall cause good ward to be taken of such churches and answer for the issues at the Exchequer during the war, so always that the said churches be duly served. (French.)

Form ordained for guardians:—

Duplicate of most of the foregoing with the one addition:—And the guardian shall find reasonable expenses for the religious from their houses as far as the places where they shall dwell, except for those who shall take money at the Exchequer. (French.)

1295. Membrane 1.

Be it remembered that on Friday, 7 July, 1307, at the bidding of Him unto whose sovereignty minister death and life, Edward, king of England, of famous memory, departed this life in the thirty-fifth year of his reign at Burgh upon Sands without Carlisle, while going towards the parts of Scotland, fired with the zeal of devotion and faith, to avenge the despite and sacrilegious contumely inhumanly done to God and Holy Church by Robert de Brus, who seditiously slew John Comyn of Scotland in the church of the Friars Minors of Dumfres, and to repress with a mighty hand the rebellion of the same Robert, because contrary to his homage and his oath of fealty he caused himself to be crowned king of Scotland; Master Ralph de Baudok, bishop of London, the king's chancellor, being then at London with the great seal, which chancellor, by the counsel of Sirs Otto de Grandissono, R. le Brabazon and others of the king's council, and by the counsel of Sirs William de Blyburgh, chancellor, and Walter Renaud, keeper of the wardrobe of Edward, the king's son and heir, sealed writs of course with the same seal until St. James the Apostle following, because he had no certain knowledge of the king's death before that day, and on Saturday following received orders from the said Edward the king's son, then at Carlisle, where Anthony de Bek, bishop of Durham, patriarch of Jerusalem, H. de Lacy, earl of Lincoln, and other earls and barons of the realm did homage and fealty to him as king, by letters of the said Edward sealed under his privy seal, to bring his said father's seal to him that he might put the same under safe keeping under his seal, which seal was afterwards sent to Carlisle under the seals of the said bishop and William de Blyburgh by Hugh de Burgo, clerk of the Chancery, and Richard de Lughteburgh and John de Munden, clerks of the bishop, on Tuesday, the morrow of St. Peter's Chains.
